|                         | 12 pm - 1 pm  | Urban agriculture andgardens: an opportunityfor sustainability andurban heat islandmitigation in cities. | Ms.Shruti S,SOET SOETand Dr. Mukesh,SOA, IGNOU | SOET           | Rapid urbanization has led to the conversion ofagricultural land into human settlements leadingto a decline of land under food cultivation.Cities depend on food that comes from outsidetheir land area which sometimes even stretchesacross continents. The correspondingenvironmental impact of this food distributionsystem in the form of carbon footprint is high.Several initiatives are being taken to encourageurban farming and urban gardening at global andcommunity levels. Studies have shown thaturban green regions not only help in addressingthe food needs of residents of the cities but alsocan mitigate urbanisation related climateproblems like urban heat islands. All theseaspects will be discussed in this session in detail. |     |                   |

| Friday23. 08.2024    | 11 am – 12 pm | Constitutional Provisions and Acts for Tribals          | Prof. Rose Nembia                 | SOSW   | In this session, we will discuss the provisions and legislations ensured in the Constitution of India for the Scheduled Tribes (STs). Attempts will also be made to highlight the various Constitutional provisions for the Scheduled Tribes of India to safeguard their interests and empower them for a life of equality, justice and dignity. Important Acts promulgated for ensuring protection of tribals from atrocities, control over resources and their management and local governance in Scheduled Areas and Tribal Areas will also be discussed along with the rationale behind positive discrimination and other legislations relevant to the Scheduled Tribes of India. | CTRBS | BSW-041         |
